A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

A testimonial (so called) published in THE ORE GONIAN purporting to have come from Judge Hayes, king, he (he) is dismissed, and (without the signature of the author wherein she appears to now endorse the Steinway piano dealer as a reply ... only in justice to Judge Hayes, and in justice to the famous Decker Bros piano which Madam King uses exclusively at all of her concerts. Perfection in the construction of a piano forte is a consideration admired by such artists as Madam King. We admit that the Steinway has obtained quite a fair reputation—purchased with money, and many were sold (I presume) prior to Madam Rita's visit to Portland, but like the stage coach of the olden time is left behind, to give place to the elegant palace car. Messrs Decker Bros., of New York, after forty years of untiring, earnest labor, have reached a degree of perfection in piano fortes so unstable in their reputation as that unprincipled par ties have attempted to trade their name and fame upon. Testimonials to suppose their full merit, and can be had at Messrs Decker Bros' piano rooms, 11 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal. Their piano is the piano for artists, and a visit to their warerooms will convince any lover of music that the Decker Bros piano is the Madam Rita piano. In conclusion I would like to say that the Decker Bros piano is the piano I use, and my card will appear in a few days.

FRIDAY MORNIN., JUNE 16, 1882

AN EXCUSELESS BLUNDER.

The extreme slowness with which people seem to appreciate economic truths, and to bow in submission to the natural laws of trade instead of practically resisting them to their own lasting injury, is illustrated once more in the strikes and lock-outs which now prevail in the manufacturing centers of the country. If there is one lesson which the laborer has learned over and over again by the dear teachings of experience, and which has been recommended to him by his friends time out of mind, it is that in order to accomplish his purpose he must strike with the market and not against it. If labor is ever to make its own terms with capital, it must be when the returns upon labor are so large that it cannot afford to be idle for a moment. If a strike is ever to be justified it is when the price of raw material remaining the same and that of the manufactured product being steadily on the rise, the manufacturer refuses to share any part of their extraordinary profits with the workmen. Not only is there then a moral reason for resistance, but under such conditions no employer can afford to let his machinery stand idle. Justice and policy are in a powerful combination to enforce the laborer's demands. But when the opposite conditions prevail, when the markets are overstocked and prices and profits are correspondingly low, to demand additional wages is to demand that the manufacturer commit financial suicide. Yet such a time as this is almost always chosen for a general strike. Take the present for instance. Everything indicates that the amalgamated associations of iron and steel are playing completely into the hands of the iron masters. The latter have in the market a superabundance of products which they cannot dispose of, except at a sacrifice. The business of iron manufacture has been overdone in the few years past and the market feels the reaction. When both humanity and fear of censure would restrain the manufacturer from stopping production and throwing his men out of employment, the men step in and solve this difficulty for him by striking. In all probability the news that the men have struck in nine cases out of ten, at the present juncture, is relief to the masters. They can dispose of surplus stock, get the market in healthy condition, and be once more ready to resume business at a profit by the time the resources of the union are exhausted and the hunger-smitten workmen are ready to go back to work upon almost any terms. The test that, after these simple truths have been repeatedly illustrated and confirmed by experience, the labor organizations should pursue the same operations, is a strange instance of folly.

The present strike is not against any proposed reduction of wages, but for an advance, in the face of a falling market for iron manufactures, the leaders aver. It is estimated that there is now an excess of iron and steel manufactured over the consumption, and that for some months to come, the capitalists in the meantime reaping all the advantage of the gradual rise in prices which may be expected to follow cessation of production.

The present movement is unaccompanied by threats, and it seems to be the intention of the leaders to carry it forward by peaceable means alone. If this plan has in one or two instances been violated, it has been by individuals who alone should bear the blame. Perhaps the experience of five years ago was not thrown away. Information which comes through the papers is apt to be remembered, and the old saw that labor lost that time not only lost sympathy and prestige in 1877, but many a hard-earned dollar, has gone since then to pay for property which the labor riots destroyed. It is to be remembered, however, that the conflict has but just fairly begun, and hope may be disappointed when actual suffering is joined to the slowly dawning perception of a great mistake made, and a great advantage forfeited. The strike against a falling market is an extraordinary blunder. It injures everybody but the manufacturer, who is anxious to get rid of an over supply. And at all times and occupations that compel a collapse, the present time and the occupation of iron manufacture are about the worst.

HANCOCK AND THE PENNSYLVANIA GUBERNATORIAL NOMINATION.

The rumor to the effect that General Hancock was seriously entertaining a proposition to become the Democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania is repeated. It has so many elements of inherent absurdity that it would be unworthy of any serious attention were it not so persistently reported, without contradiction by any leader of all the plans of politicians, all seems to be the most ridiculous. The objection is that the mention of Hancock's name would take the convention by storm, that he could be easily elected, and would then make his governorship a stepping stone to reach the coveted presidency. There are more sane men in this universe of events than is a Pennsylvania convention on the eve of election. The idea that Hancock would get the nomination if he would allow his name to be presented, if possible he could be chosen governor or not, would depend entirely upon the attitude of the Republican leaders. If the two tickets in the field, if they should divide into anything like equal parties, he might slip in as a minority candidate, but his unforgotten factor on the party question with reference to placing him with Mackenzie which is so much easier to meet than speculation. Perhaps it is not rash to say that no man who calls the tariff "a local issue" can be governor of Pennsylvania. But suppose him elected, who then? He would not even a great state behind him, he did not carry it before, he has not made any such showing in two years hence would depend upon the extremely improbable contingency of two republican candidates being in the field. He would be far from sure of a nomination, and still further from sure of an election. The idea that General Hancock will give up the honorable position he now holds to run such a gauntlet of chances does little honor to his judgement. It is far more probable that the plan is the birth of the desperate anxiety to gain the presidency next time, which is already defying the democracy fairly wild with anxiety. Judge Black is credited with the planning of this democratic house that Jack built, and its architecture certainly does bear the marks of his well known constructive genius.

Any one who did not know that a new congress is to be elected this fall, and that the importance of all legislation depends solely upon its supposed influence upon that event, would imagine the bankrupt bill to be a gigantic scheme for robbing the people, which must be advanced slowly and cautiously until it can be rushed through at some unguarded moment. The friends of the Lowell bill have been working for it earnestly, and seem quite satisfied with the prospect of being able to get it through the senate this summer, leaving it to be acted upon by the house the next session. A volume could not more clearly disclose the state of the congressional mind. Here is the one national measure which it is impossible to connect with politics or to view in the strictly party light. It is not a new thing, but a law whose enactment the business world has been anxiously asking ever since the old law was repealed. Yet it is tacitly admitted that nothing will be done about it at this session, except perhaps to secure its passage by one house. Week after week has been wasted in debate on party questions, and more is still to follow, while business interests get along the best way they can. Such neglect is intolerable, and calls for a sharp reminder to the members of congress by those ninety-nine out of every hundred voters who care nothing whatever about party squabbles.

And now it appears that we shall not have the obelisk in our eyes in summer and ruin our boots in winter. Its too, too bad. The report that the dear old dear was wilting under the extremes of New York weather is denied. The World, which has been a sort of godfather to the monolith, asserts that the rumors of decay were started by a scheming Yankee, who wanted to advertise a certain patent paint by plastering the old slab with it, upon the pretense that it would preserve the stone. The World adds: "Nobody need quarrel with the silica 'paint fiend' who has kicked up all this idiotic hubbery. The poor fellow is only trying to turn the monument of Thothmes III. into an advertisement, just as his congeners do the rocks on the Hudson and the cliffs of the Catskills. But grown men not in the 'paint-fiend' line ought to be ashamed of themselves for rushing into print on such subjects without taking ordinary pains to learn whether they are talking sense or nonsense."

A re-arrangement of precincts or increase in the number of polling places within the precincts of this city has come to be a necessity. To count the large vote cast in Morrison precinct at the recent election required continuous labor on the part of judges and clerks for seventy-two hours. This is a serious and wholly useless hardship. Besides, delays are annoying. It would be easy to appoint two or three polling places in each precinct, and by so doing the trouble would be avoided.

Cincinnati is musical, but not literary. An inquirer asks The Commercial "the title of a book containing the comic poem, 'One more unfortunate, weary of life—('of breath,' Hood wrote). I think Bret Harte wrote it, and it went the rounds of the papers fifteen years ago." The Commercial replies: "We know of no such book. A clever parody containing the line you quote was printed in the newspapers some years ago, but it does not seem ever to have been issued in any book."

Honest poverty is a poor factor in Colorado politics. Of the half-dozen or more aspirants for Chilcott's seat, all are millionaires.

FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 16, 1882.

CITY.

SLIGHT RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—The south bound train of the O. & C. R. R. met with an accident at Hubbard Wednesday, which detained it two hours. As the train was pulling out from the depot at that place a spring rail at one of the switches slipped to one side, letting the wheels of one of the forward cars drop on the ties. Before a stoppage could be made, an empty stock car and a box car full of Chinamen were thrown from the rails, as was also the rear truck of the passenger and the front truck of the mail and express car. Freight motor No. 7 was standing on the switch, and was coupled on the rear of the train to assist in pulling the cars upon the track again, but was soon rendered useless by the breaking of her front coupling bar. After much labor all damage was repaired and the train went on its way. No one was injured, not even a Chinaman.

FIRE ON D STREET.—A second fire alarm was sounded yesterday morning about a quarter past 8 o'clock, and "three" and "ones" turned out to response. The blaze was discovered in a small wooden building, occupied as a dwelling house and owned by C. A. Barchard, situate on B street between Twelfth and Thirteenth. The fire was caused by a defective flue in the attic. The flames broke through the roof but were extinguished by buckets of water, without the aid of the firemen.

WOODBURN FESTIVAL.—From the programme of the great grove festival which is to take place on the 23d at Woodburn, we gather the names of a number of the leading artists of the city. According to the bill, oratory and elocution and music, from grand opera to minstrelsy, will occupy the day. If this affair is carried out according to the programme, the Woodburn festival will certainly be, as it claims, a monster affair, and the originatory of a new order of entertainment to this coast.

MORE BUOYANT FEELING.—Trans-Continental has jumped in three days from 65 to 74, and Oregon improvement in five days from 63 to 71, and there's a whole lot of men down town feeling better. It may have been the knowledge that the state affairs will be in honest hands for the next two years that caused the advance in stock. But whatever may have been the cause, those who subscribed and their courage strengthened.

VIOLATING THE POSTAL LAWS.—Special Postal Agent Ben Simpson, went to Sweet Home, Linn Co., last Tuesday and arrested Daniel B. Morris, of that place, on a charge of sending obscene letters and pictures through the mails. Morris was brought to Portland and had an examination before U. S. Commissioner Paul Deady, who held him to answer to the charge in the sum of $500.

THE OREGON'S CARGO.—The Oregon, which sailed for Portland yesterday, brings 189 cabin passengers, 179 in the steerage, and 1437 tons of freight, of which 125 tons are for Astoria. The steamer Victoria, which sailed Wednesday for Portland, with combustibles, brings 1638 tons for Portland, 18 for Astoria, and 361 for British Columbia.

CALVARY PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—Rev. E. T. Lee, who has been called to the pastorate of the Calvary Presbyterian church, writes from the east that he expects to be here and preach on Sunday, July 16th. Until that date the pulpit will be occupied, by the Rev. J. R. Thompson, of Olympia, who is expected to arrive to-morrow evening.

LAKE ROAD.—The O. R. & N. Co. yesterday dispatched a boat from Tacoma to San Juan, which will bring back 600 barrels of lime—a much needed article during the building season. Hereafter a boat will make regular weekly trips after lumber.

CONVENTIONS.—This morning the republican delegates will choose a candidate for mayor at the county court room. In the afternoon the democrats will choose candidates for mayor and the council. The election takes place Monday, the 19th inst.

CLEARED.—The American bark Adolph Orig cleared yesterday with a cargo of flour valued at $102,500. She will finish with salmon at Astoria. The Importer cleared with a cargo of flour for Cork direct.

STEAM.—The Oregon synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church will meet at Brownsville, Linn county, Thursday, the 29th inst., at 7:30 P. M.

THE WEEKLY NUMBERS in last night's drawing at Mellis Bros.' & Co. will be found on this page of to-day's issue.

BRIEF MENTION.

United Workmen concert to-night.

Rose City Lodge will confer to-night.

Blue Ribbon Saloon to-morrow. Customary prices and a popular programme.

About 12,000 pounds of clean, bright valley wool were sold here yesterday at 26½c.

East Portland will have a new fire plug put in at the corner of Second and Pownall streets to-morrow.

Bishop Morris will officiate at Grace church, Astoria, Sunday, June 18th, both morning and evening.

The opportunity to hear Madame Blue-King, the greatest American pianist, should not be neglected.

Policeman James deserves mention for assistance rendered at the late fire at the American Exchange house.

Mr. Louis F. Ockhart, of Chicago, representing the passenger department of the C. B. & Q. railroad, is in the city.

There will be a regular meeting of Portland Lodge No. 51, A. F. & A. M., at their lodge room, Masonic temple, this evening at 7:30 o'clock. Work.

Hans McCormick and Peter Laignel, two farmers living near Gulich lake, Columbia county, had the former's head in a bag at the hands of the latter. McCormick went to law, and Squire Davis imposed a fine of $5 and costs on the belligerent Laignel.

THE HIGH WATER.

The Willamette has been at a stand for twenty-four hours. The Rise is still down and no news from the Columbia has been received except Indefinite reports, but no one is to the effect that the river is falling steadily. Superintendent Gregg, chief signal officer at Dayton, for regions, telegraphed Tom Cronemiller as follows: "The gauges were received in a bunch from The Dalles, by last night's boat, 11th, river at Lewiston rose four inches in twenty-four hours, 12th, fell fourteen inches, 13th rail stopped rising, 14th, fell fourteen inches."

TABLE ROCK IS NOW CLEAR OF WATER.

The third of the Blue King concerts takes place to-night, and the King includes entrance Wagner, Liszt, Gottschalk and Verdi. The sale of seats continues to be unusually large.

The matinee at the Opera House yesterday afternoon was attended by a fair audience, over one hundred and twenty being sold, yesterday. A very fine programme is being arranged. Saturday night occurs the fourth and last of the King concerts.

A REMEDY FOR LADIES AND CHILDREN.

We had the pleasure of attending the picnic and concert given by Mr. Eno's Rippinger at City View Park and private grounds last Sunday, and have no hesitation in saying that Portland has at last a place where the ladies and children can go on Sunday without being thrown in with the usual Sunday picnic crowd. This is the place where they can take their own lunches and spread them, the same as if they were at their own homes. The regular concert will take place again next Sunday, and dancing in the pavilion. The price of tickets has been placed at $1, while ladies and children are charged nothing. Everything being free for them—boat fare and all. The boat and regular steamer A. A. McCully leaves Morrison street wharf at 10:30, 11:30, 1:30 and 3:30. Returning, leaves grounds at 5:30 and 7 P. M. To the music lover of the week, this is the place for one's recreation, and enjoyment for his family.

WEEKLY WEATHER RECORD.

The following is the meteorological report for the week ending June 13, 1882:

CARRIE BRADLEY SENTENCED.

TWELVE YEARS IN THE PENITENTIARY FOR THE KILLING OF A. N. BROWN.

No Attempt to Secure a New Trial—Counsel for the Prisoner makes an Appeal to the Court for a Light Penalty.

At about half past nine yesterday morning, after the opening of the state circuit court, Carrie Bradley was brought before the bar of justice to receive the sentence of Judge Stott, for the crime of manslaughter of which she had been found guilty. No motion had been made by the prisoner's counsel for a new trial, and it was understood that she was well satisfied with the result. There was no shade of anxiety in her face as she took her seat, and the composure with which she listened to the addresses in her behalf and against her, and finally the judge's charge, could only come from a mind hardened to all feeling and care less of any fate. When asked by the court if she had any statement to make, she replied simply, "I have not."

APPEALING TO THE MERCY OF THE COURT.

Judge Watson, of counsel for Bradley, addressed the court, and said he desired to say something in regard to why the court should not attach the extreme penalty of the law. The defendant was indicted for murder in the first degree. The jury found her guilty of manslaughter only. He desired to direct the attention of the court to the fact that the jury were out only a short time. So that the considerations they arrived at were not in the nature of a compromise verdict, after a long deliberation. The jury have negatived all questions of malice, premeditation or purpose or killing. The jury have found that there was no purpose to kill. There are no circumstances of atrocity connected with the affair. If we except the disposing of the body after the death, that would justify the longest sentence. The jury and the court were bound to take the mildest interpretation of the evidence. Because she was killed was a participator in the crimes of those partners in the manner of their places, and while the acts makes no difference, murder is murder, whether we may be the victim, yet it is notjust strong a case when we know that this man 60 years old, was in the violation of moral and municipal law, as it would be if the latter were a good citizen who was killed while engaged in an ordinary business or in pleasure. Mr. Watson then went over the evidence and contended that a better interpretation of the testimony would show that Judge Adams applied the law. He then spoke of the kind of a place kept by the defendant, and said it was demanded that the punishment should be severe on that account. He contended that the community had nothing to gain by making those places safe against these greater crimes. If men were to know that in going there they were going "as the ox to the slaughter," they would keep away. Mr. Watson then alluded to the Jane of Sullivan. The testimony showed that Carrie Bradley was not in any event more guilty in this crime than Sullivan. Everything charged upon Bradley was done by Sullivan, and the fact that he pleaded guilty had nothing to do with the enormity of the offense. Counsel did think that there was some extenuation according to the testimony that would make Bradley less guilty than Sullivan, who got a sentence of five years. The law gives a wide discretion to the court, as the penalty for this is from one to fifteen years. He did not ask the court for the lowest penalty and certainly did not ask the court should inflict the highest. Mr. Watson desired to say in behalf of the defendant and counsel that the court had given a fair trial. They had no complaint to make so far as the trial is concerned.

JUDGE CAPLES RESPONDS.

Mr. J. F. Caples in reply said that the court and jury and the community have had about as much of this case as they desired, and he would not make any extended remarks. He would say in passing that Carrie Bradley ought to be well satisfied with the result of the trial. He was willing to say that the jury did right in their decision, and the verdict was in accordance with the law in the case. But the court, in rendering its judgment, is bound to consider the fact that this whole affair of the killing of J. N. Brown was done under her personal control and direction. It was done in one of those establishments that disgrace our city, and was a crime that deserves no consideration. Necessity, for there was no palliation. Brown was taken to her house almost by force. He was so drunk that he had no will of his own. This woman, according to her own testimony, was guilty of a great crime, and he hoped the court would consider the character of her business, that interests of the community, and the enormity of this offense in passing sentence upon this woman.

SENTENCE OF THE COURT.

Judge Stott asked the prisoner to stand up, which she did. He then said that the killing of the man, J. N. Brown, was the result of a deliberate purpose to thwart the course of justice. While it was not a premeditation to kill, it was the intention to defeat the course of the law. This was a crime of a grave and serious nature. The prisoner admitted that she aided and abetted for the purpose of retaining in her custody for questioning drunk so that he could not testify against her. This crime resulted in an accidental death. But it is a crime not much less than murder in the manner with the course of justice or with witnesses, jurors and others, as to defeat the purposes of the law. This is striking at the very foundations of our social and political structure. The sentence of the court is that she be confined in the penitentiary for the period of twelve years, and pay the costs of the prosecution.

The prisoner received the judgment of the court with a great deal of composure, and exhibited no indication of surprise at the sentence. She looked the judge full in the face during the delivery of his remarks, and quietly took her seat when the sentence was concluded. She held a brief consultation with her attorneys, Messrs. Watson, Mason and Boise, who were all in court. During this conference she was seen to smile several times. Sheriff Buchtel then took charge of the prisoner, and she walked quietly down stairs to her cell.

This closes the last scene in the courts of justice in this remarkable trial. There were not a great many spectators present, and the sentence created no surprise. The woman who has figured so conspicuously for the past three or four years in the criminal records of the city will soon be taken and incarcerated within the walls of the state penitentiary. When she comes out she will be an old woman. The attraction of face and feature which has perhaps been the wreck and ruin of her own life and the ruin of many into the paths of sin, will have disappeared, and the beauty which time will have impressed upon her heart may still bear its fruit before her death.

NEW YORK, April 17, 1881.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS—Gentlemen:—I just returning as I am from an extended tour of this country and Canada, having used one of your celebrated Concert Grands during my Tournee, which embraced 139 Concerts, I cannot but express to you my unlimited admiration of the marvelous durability of your pianos, besides their matchless qualities of tone and touch. The weather, as you know, during the past season was unusually severe. For 4 weeks during our concerts in the far west the thermometer was never higher than 10 degrees below zero and at St. Paul 42 degrees below zero during my concerts there. Notwithstanding the severe test of the instrument by the elements, I used the piano almost nightly, which necessitated transportation on an average of 100 miles per day, the piano having no protection but a canvas cover. I found it always equal to the occasion, rarely requiring tuning, and during all this time not a string broke or a hammer out of order.

Will you kindly send me one of your small Grands (if possible the same one I had before) for my private use while in the city.

In the constant use of your pianos in my own home, and in all my public concerts, where I have had my own choice, I have become so accustomed to them, that I do not feel at home without them. Please accept these lines from one who prefers your pianos to all others. Yours respectfully,

STATE MEDICAL SOCIETY.

Morning Session.

The meeting was called to order by the president, C. H. Merrick, M. D., at 10 o'clock A. M.

After some preliminary business Dr. Eaton was invited to read a paper on ophthalmia caused by foreign bodies in the eye.

Dr. Alonzo Brown was then called on, who read a biographical sketch of the late Chas. R. Darwin.

On motion of Dr. Rex, the committee appointed at the last meeting to amend the constitution and by-laws, was allowed to make their report. Several important amendments were offered, and after some slight alterations by the society were adopted.

The board of censors reporting favorably upon the following persons, they were elected members of the society: G. S. Allison, M. D., of Portland; George H. Britt, M. D., of Roseburg; J. W. Givens, M. D., of Milwaukie; Mrs. J. A. Owens, M. D., of Portland; G. N. Wells, M. D., of Portland, and Charles E. Bates, M. D., of the U. S. M. Hospital service, Portland.

Afternoon Session.

Meeting called to order at 2 P. M., President Merrick in the chair.

Dr. Geo. H. Chance was, upon motion of Dr. Fisher, elected an honorary member of the society.

The election of officers for the ensuing year being now in order, it resulted as follows:

Dr. C. C. Strong, president.
Mrs. Dr. J. I. Parrish, vice president.
Dr. E. P. Fraser, secretary.

An advisory board, consisting of the following members was selected: Dr. W. H. Watkins, Dr. L. G. Rex, Dr. S. E. Josephi, Dr. H. Carpenter and Mrs. Dr. C. Charlton.

Dr. D. P. Mummer tendered his resignation as a member of the society, which was accepted.

The regular order of business was then taken up, and Dr. Taylor read a paper on perforation of the knee joint treated by plaster of paris dressing, also, one on nerve stretching for sciatica.

Dr. H. C. Wilson read a paper on ophthalmia and orchitis, and also gave a report of three cases of cataract.

Dr. James Browne, chairman of the committee on mental diseases, read an interesting paper on that subject. That part of the paper referring to the insanity of Guiteau, was discussed by Dr. Josephi.

Dr. Rex was then granted permission to exhibit the case of true lues of the skull referred to in a paper read before the society the day before.

The society then adjourned until 9 o'clock to-morrow.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

OCCASIONAL OR DESULTORINESS OF THE ORDINARIAN]
EUGENE, June 15.

Never have the sunny skies of June looked down on Eugene in lovlier dress than on this commencement week of 1882. Graceful festoons of cedar hang above the windows and from the ceiling of the auditorium. Daintiest hanging baskets, choicest floral decorations and rarest works of art, have found their way from the homes of the city into the annual decorations. The rostrum is circled with solid banks of roses and decked with gayest flowers

The baccalaureate sermon, by Rev. T. F. Campbell, president of Monmouth college, was well attended. His theme was "Discontent;" the effort was one of the best since the introduction of this department into the exercises of the week.

On Tuesday, at 3:00 P. M., His Excellency Gov. W. W. Thayer, delivered the address before the university. His theme, "Civil Government," was one especially suited to the youth of the university. The subject was timely and entertainingly presented, and all unite in giving it favorable mention.

At night the reunion of the societies Laurean and Eutaxian, was largely attended. The programme consisted of instrumental and vocal music and annals. Those furnishing music were Misses Mary Fish, May Underwood, Alice and Mary Doerix, and Messrs. Gill and Frazier and the city string band. The annals by W. T. Slater, were an improvement over those of over former years. Some of the jokes seemed to take well, but generally they were little understood by the audience.

The supper in one of the lower rooms, was one of the most pleasing parts of the programme. President J. W. Johnson presided, and after the feasting came the toasting. Hon. B. F. Dorris proposed "The Pioneers" and Gov. Thayer responded. Judge R. S. Bean the "Faculty," to which Prof. G. H. Collier responded; Prof. Straub "Henry Villard," and Prof. Bailey the response; Mrs. Prof. Bailey the "Alumni," M. S. Wallis, president of the association, replied; J. F. Hill offered "Eugene the Home of the University," Mrs. Prof. Collier responded; C. F. Clarke "The Class of '82," to which Prof. Thos. Condon gave the response. At a late hour the company dispersed to their homes.

GOSSIP FROM NEW YORK.

Millard Lowendale Makes some Ugly Comparisons between the Metropolis and Portland, and some not so Ugly.

[ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE OREGONIAN.]
NEW YORK, May 29.

Would you like to know what is going on in New York? If so, just sit down while I whisper to you across the continent, and gossip of some of the happenings in our village. We old New Yorkers are planning our wings for the annual flight seaward and to the mountains, as tropical weather is expected in a fortnight, since we have passed a very cold and disagreeable spring. Within the last two weeks, however, the season has changed, and sunny smiles again greet sunny days, while the shops and stores are tempting the ladies with fair visions of summer suits and parasols.

The streets are very gay now, and on such occasions as the parade of the Coaching club yesterday Fifth avenue is a great living fashion plate. On these days the surging of the human whirlpool is very bewildering. I stroll down Broadway and Fifth avenue sometimes, now dodging the immense bunches of lilacs which are at present so fashionable, and while so recklessly jostle a sigh render, and then attempting to calculate the number of the straggling army that reaches the country as I can determine, from the Battery away up into Canada, and I wonder if our little Portland will ever become a city. What queer fashions are encountered here. Especially in the dress of the ladies, reminding one as they flit by of some quaint old print that is really "Florentine; fourth century." The dress which will strike the sands, whose arms are indicative of compound fractures of the elbow, and the extremities of whose trousers give evidence of unprofitable encounters with rat traps, the young ladies in a light trap or two-wheeled carts taking their coachmen out driving, while the latter sit with folded arms icily "gazing sphinx-like into futurity," the chief tonsorial affection of aesthetic manners by both old and young, the industrious worship of pug and shyc, and a thousand other idiosyncrasies of metropolitan life suggest a nationality radically different from the old world. We are all aesthetic here. To be otherwise is to be out of existence. Everybody makes fun of Oscar, but everybody at the same time actually follows in his footsteps. (Sem.—Everybody queer.)

The long days of May in which we are now luxuriating bring a sigh of longing for the green fields of Oregon and remind us that our fishing tackle needs overhauling for the trout campaign. Of course, Pryce, the lucumtent deity Fashion demands that every one be considered a "rod-catcher," and the refinement of ignorance displayed by these parlor anglers is very amusing to one who for years has dropped the red hackle on the purling streams of a fisher's paradise.

The racing meeting at Jerome Park opens the fashionable summer season on Decoration day. The "nobs" remain at home to attend the American Jockey club and Sheepshead bay meetings before skimming away to the various places to display their gaudy plumage. Unlike the ever ostentatious Oregonians, the very best people of New York make a business of supporting the jockey club associations, and the opening day at Jerome Park is always one of the important events of the year. It will be particularly interesting this year, and the horse that can stop the rising of the great metropolitan will receive a Derby winner's ovation.

A flying trip to Coney Island the other day revealed a deserted and profitless world as barren of interest to a stranger as is our own Siwash. It is impossible, without seeing for one's self, to appreciate the difference between the summer and winter complexion of those resorts. I could hardly believe that where now a few country people were sitting around the stoves, decorating the floor with primitive tobacco juice and discussing Luke Blair's mishap in his daybreak trial, in a few days the cream of New York would be languidly lounging, and that there on the Atlantic's barren beach so many 5-cent "schooners" would go down in the hot days to come.

An exceptionally brilliant season of amusements is closing at the present moment. The coming of Patti and Materna were the most notable events of the year, but at no time during the winter has there been a dearth of attractive entertainments. The rivalry of Damrosch and Thomas gave the New York public a succession of symphony concerts, the excellence of which has never been approached here, and culminated in the May Festival, the success of the year. It was here that Materna created such enthusiasm that the demonstrations were compared with those bestowed upon Jenny Lind. During the winter a number of Oregon favorites have visited the city with varying fortunes. As you may know, Emelie Melville was a great failure and disbanded her company. She has lost all her spirituelle-ness. Her voice went years ago. Max Freeman made a great hit in "Divorcons," the cast of which also included Mrs. Lingard. John Swinn invests with new interest the old man in "Le Lavadin," upon which play the curtain of the Madi on Square theater will probably ring up until next season. I was somewhat startled the evening before acts of this play by the sound of Charley Bray's Multnomah March, as played by the Madison Square orchestra. Annie Pixley played two very successful engagements here. The little lady, as handsome as ever, is a great favorite and is putting away much "kale saved."

The art exhibitions, two of which are open now, have been of surpassing interest, and yet one often thinks what a sensation would be created if some of Capt. Rockwell's pictures of Oregon scenery hung on the academy's walls. Is this prejudice? This reminds me that one day, while lounging in the Corcoran art gallery at Washington, I could not resist a mental comparison of the original Charlotte Corday with the well known copy owned by Jay Thompson, much to the credit of the latter. It is in my estimation, the better picture, as the expression of the eyes is more intense than in the original and the drawing of the hand is less angular.

Everybody is now praying that the prospects of an oppressive summer, following the thoroughly disagreeable winter, may not be realized. So your pilgrim will ever pray. M. O. L.

BURR AND HAMILTON.

Reminiscences of the Duel Between Them.

James Parton.

Few of the present generation have stood upon the spot which was formerly one of the places that strangers were sure to visit on coming to the city, and which the events of this day rendered forever memorable. Two miles and a half above the city of Hoboken, the hights of Weehawken rise, in the picturesque form so familiar to New Yorkers, to an elevation of 150 feet above the Hudson. These hights are rocky, very deep, and covered with small trees and tangled bushes. Under the hights, at a point half a mile from where they begin, there is, twenty feet above the water, a grassy ledge or shelf, about six feet wide and eleven paces long. This was the fatal spot. Except that it is slightly incumbered with underbrush, it is, at this hour, precisely what it was on the 11th of July, 1804. There is an old cedar tree at the side, a little out of range, which must have looked then very much as it does now. The large rocks which partly hem in the place are, of course, unchanged, except that they are decorated with the initials of former visitors. One large rock, breast high, narrows the hollow in which Hamilton stood to four feet or less.

Inaccessible to foot-passengers along the river, except at low tide, with no path down it from the rocky heights above, no residence within sight on that side of the river, unless at a great distance, it is even now a singularly secluded scene. But fifty years ago, when no prophet had yet predicted Hoboken, that romantic shore was a nearly unbroken solitude. A third of a mile below the dueling ground there stood a little tavern, the occasional resort of excursionists; where, too, dueling parties not unfrequently breakfasted before proceeding to the ground, and where they sometimes returned to invigorate their restored friendship with the landlord's wine. A short distance above the ground lived a fine-hearted old captain, who, if he got scent of a duel, would rush to the place, throw himself between the combatants, and never give over persuading and threatening till he had established a peace of a truce between them. He was the owner of the ground, and took its authority. He never ceased to think that if on this fatal morning he had observed the approach of the boats he could have prevented the subsequent catastrophe.

But for the very purpose of preventing suspicion, it had been arranged that Colonel Pen's boat should arrive some time before the other. About half past six, Burr and Van Ness landed, and leaving their boat a few yards down the river, ascended over the rocks to the appointed place. It was a warm, bright July morning. The sun looks down, directly after rising, upon the Weehawken hights, and it was for that reason that the two men removed their coats before the arrival of the other party. There they stood, carelessly breaking away the branches of the underwood, and looking out upon as fair, as various, as animated, as beautiful a scene, as mortal eyes in this beautiful world ever beheld. The fresh-crowned city, the bright, broad, flashing, tranquil river; the long reach of waters, twelve miles or more, down to the narrows; the vessels at anchor in the harbor; misty, blue Staten island, swelling up in superb contour from the lower bay; the verdant flowery heights around; the opposite shore of the river, then dark with forest, or bright with sloping lawn; and to crown the picture, that remarkably characteristic promontory called Castle Point, that bends out far into the stream, a mile below Weehawken, and adds a peculiar beauty to the foreground—all these combine to form a view, one glance at which ought to leave sent in his heart to the duelist's last hour, that so much as the thought of closing a human being's eyes forever on so much loveliness, had ever flitted a moment in his bosom.

Hamilton's boat was seen to approach. A few minutes before 7 it touched the rocks, and Hamilton and his second ascended. The principals and seconds exchanged the usual salutations, and the secon is proceeded immediately to make the usual preparations. They measured ten full paces; then cast lots for the choice of position, and to decide who should give the word. The lot, in both cases, fell to General Hamilton's second, who chose the upper end of the ledge for his principal, which, at that hour of the day, could not have been the best, for the reason that the morning sun and the flashing of the river would both interfere with the sight. The pistols were then loaded and the principals placed. Hamilton looked down the river toward the city, and Burr toward the hights, under which they stood. As Pendleton gave Hamilton his pistol he asked,

"Will you have the hair-spring set?"

"Not this time," was the quiet reply.

Pendleton then explained to both principals the rules that had been agreed upon with regard to the firing; after the word "present" they were to fire as soon as they pleased. The seconds then withdrew to the usual distance.

"Are you ready?" said Pendleton.

They answered in the affirmative. A momentary pause ensued. The word was given. Burr raised his pistol, took aim and fired. Hamilton sprung upon his toes with a convulsive movement, reeled a little toward the right, and, with almost the same motion, fell headlong upon his face and remained motionless on the ground. His ball rustled among the branches, never lost above the head of his antagonist and four feet wide of him. Burr heard it, looked up, and saw where had been aimed. Leaning with his left hand, and falling, and about to spring toward him with an expression of pain on his face. But at the report of the pistol Mr. Hoesack, Mr. Davis and the boatmen hurried carriously up the rocks to the scene of the fight, and Van Ness, with great presence of mind, signed Burr to withdraw from observation with an umbrella, and urged him down the steep to the boat.

Candy Palatials.

Chicago Times.

The purchaser of two pictures by Edward Long, recently sold at the late Mr. Morgan's sale in London, was Mr. Frederick Leyland, of Prince's Gate. Thirty-two thousand dollars is said to be the largest price ever paid for an English artist's painting during his lifetime. The Professor thinks his new purchases to be added to the fine art collection he has already made, are cost of about $250,000, for the new Liverpool Home for Imbeciles he has built as a Virginia Water.

The Wheat Trade.

We have thought it advisable at this time, when the future of the wheat market is more or less a subject of speculation with farmers and dealers to review the exporters on the subject, to the end that farmers may know how they test on the situation, and compare notes. We find in pursuing this investigation that while it is conceded that freights will rule on a much lower basis than last season, that, notwithstanding this, the failure of the crops of growing crops the world over is unsatisfactory, and promises so well, it depresses the markets at the points of probable demand, and results in the conviction of low prices here for the ensuing season. This is rather unpalatable to the but it seems to be borne out by advices received from England where the market is bare, naturally depressed under the influence of advices referred to. To be plain, our exports now believe with the low freights probable, in the face of a good crop inevitable, that Walla Walla wheat will bear a value of $1 50 per cental, and Valley at $1 60, as an average for the fall months. Let this prediction be borne in mind and we show it tallies with other conjectures of the future.

BAGS.

Bags are active with an upward tendency. Calcutta, 10c.

WOOL.

Owing to the flood, no wool has been received during the week. Prices are lower. An extra choice lot would bring 25c. Lower grades are dull and lower.

Portland Produce Prices.

Flour is quiet and prices are steady. There is increased local trade for standard brands. Good country and superfine brands are wanted for shipment. The cut market is unchanged. Prices in San Francisco against sellers. Stocks held there are rather light, but are, however, in excess of the demand. Barley is unchanged. The San Francisco market for old barley is very firm and stocks are light. Baled timothy hay continues scarce and there is an increased demand. The local trade here is supplied almost entirely with loose hay from farmers' wagons. There is no change to note in cured meats. Good side meat and shoulders are wanted. Nothing new in lard. There is increased demand for good lard in kegs. Dried apples are very quiet. Green fruit now in market affects their sale. Little or no sale for dried plums. Hops are unchanged. The San Francisco market presents a more favorable outlook and there is a general impression that prices will be better soon. Stocks held in San Francisco are estimated at only 750 bales. Receipts of butter have been very large. The market, however, continues firm at quotations, and the general impression is that the flood, by covering low pasture land, will cause a scarcity and higher prices. Onions are firm. The market is now almost wholly supplied with new onions from San Francisco. Receipts of eggs are very light. Prices are firm and there is prospect of an advance. Chickens are arriving slowly. We have to note a slight advance in price during the past week. Old potatoes are very dull sale. Choice new from California are arriving by each steamer in large lots. shingles are in fair demand.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKETS.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.

Receipts—Wheat, 6500 ctls; flour, 3900 qr sks; oats, none; potatoes, 1900 sacks; eggs, 17,000 doz.

Wheat—The market is steady with nothing to indicate any speedy disturbance of values. Sales No. 1 white, $1 70, alongside. Quotations unchanged.

Flour—The market is firm at unchanged quotations. Supplies are smaller than demand.

Barley—The market is firm for old, with prices against buyers. Sales of No. 1 feed, 1 car, at 90c; 2 cars choice brewing at $1 35@2; new feed, $1 60@1 62½.

Oats—The market has a steady tone which even dictates upward shake. To change to note in quotations. Sales of fair Oregon at $1 80; No. 2 September, $1 87½.

Potatoes—Heavy stocks, much of inferior quality. A light demand and anxiety of sellers to realize, enables buyers to have very much their own way. Sales of forty sacks at 62½@1 cwt. Extra choice qualities of Garnet Chili, new, $1 25.

Onions—Market weak at 50@65c.

Bran—Prices are easy at $14 50@15.

Grain Bags—Market is steady. There is no change to note in quotations.

Salmon—Columbia river, unchanged. No sales of round lots reported.

Wool—Dull with next to nothing doing. Buyers and sellers are at a complete deadlock. Quotations nominal and unchanged.

Eggs—Prices are not materially changed, yet a slight tendency to sellers' favor is noted, especially for select.

Butter—Steady at 22@31c.

Beecher is "Off."

Chicago Herald.

Henry Ward Beecher says that "all good music is sacred if it is heard sacredly, and all poor music is execrably unsacred." This is an apt illustration of how foolishly even great men will talk when they speak upon subjects of which they know nothing. Can Mr. Beecher discover any sanctity in "The Babies on Our Block," "The Mulligan Guards," "Over the Garden Wall," etc? And yet these pieces are considered examples of good music by many people.

Now is the Time to Look to Your Roofs.

C. F. PEARSON'S

ROOFING COMPOSITION.

Patented Nov. 16, 1880.

This is a preparation for covering roofs of all kinds. Has been used on the Vanderbilt and other fine residences in Central Park, New York.

IT WILL NOT Crack and Leak

By reason of expansion and contraction, as it is elastic and will not harden. Is not affected by heat or cold. Is not injured by coal gas or sea air. Is cheaper than tin, and can be put on by any one. Is readily applied to new or old roofs. Is a non-conductor of heat and cold. Is a good protection against fire. Is unequaled for flat roofs. Is unequaled for steep roofs. Is unequaled for carpenter work. Is unequaled for iron work. Is unequaled for tin work. Is unequaled for shingle roofs. Is unequaled for canvas roofs. Is unequaled for felt roofs. Is unequaled for all roofs.

BY PERMISSION WE REFER:

Mr. C. F. Pearson: Portland, Or., March 28, 1882.

Dear Sir—We have used your roofing composition on our dwelling house and find it very satisfactory. Have used it on two other houses with like success. Can recommend it to all who desire a good roof. Yours truly, T. J. CARTWRIGHT.

Mr. C. F. Pearson: Portland, Or., March 28, 1882.

Dear Sir—I have used your roofing composition on my residence and find it very satisfactory. Can recommend it to all who desire a good roof. Yours truly, C. H. LEWIS.

Mr. C. F. Pearson: Salem, Or., March 28, 1882.

Dear Sir—I have great pleasure in stating that I consider your Roofing Composition the best I have ever used for the purpose. It is easily applied and in the opinion of practical men is far superior to tin. Yours truly, R. M. WADE.

Portland, Or., Feb. 24, 1882.

Mr. C. F. Pearson:

Dear Sir—Allow me to testify to my appreciation of your durable roofing composition. At this summer was placed on the new Yaquina bridge, it was promptly used by the passenger travel. It did not injure it at all, but it was a perfect protection against the heat of the sun, while no other kind of roofing could be applied. It is now in good condition without any additional cost as when first put on. Letters to myself follow. JAMES WILSON,

Master O. R. & N. Co.'s S. S. Thompson.

Portland, Or., Feb. 24, 1882.

Mr. C. F. Pearson:

Dear Sir—Notwithstanding our efforts to secure a good roof over our immense stock of goods in the fall of 1880, we were unable to keep the water out by mechanical skill—we have losses of goods to thousands of dollars from the leaks. Last year your roofing composition was put on over our stores. It has given entire satisfaction. Never ceased the process of leaking in the least since we used it. Keeps cool in summer and warm in winter. Very respectfully yours,

FERGUSON, MAYER & CO.,

OAKLAND, Cal., March 11, 1882.

C. F. Pearson:

Dear Sir—I have tried your "Roofing Composition" on several of my houses in Portland, Oregon. They all say for me I know, have given entire satisfaction. I believe it makes a better roof than tin or shingles. Respectfully yours, J. C. AINSWORTH.

We consider it to be superior to anything yet discovered to be durable, and will sell it to all who want a good roof. Yours truly,

PEARSON, MAYER & CO.

The "Iron Paint Composition" and "Cement for mending and applying flat tarred felt," is included in the letters of Patent, granted Nov. 16, 1880. Any infringement on same shall be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

No matter of how long standing the case may be, or how many physicians have failed to cure, he will undertake it. Consultation free. Medicines sent to all parts of the country. Correspondence strictly confidential. Address as follows:

DOLLIES OF YOUTH,

Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, or Loss of Sexual Power, Impotency, Nervousness, and all the chronic diseases resulting either from the indiscretions of youth or the excesses of manhood, are treated with success by the Doctor, who is a graduate of the Medical Profession.

If a man is suffering from any of the above diseases who will call on or write to the Doctor, stating his case fully, and inclosing a stamp for reply, can rest assured that he will receive such medical advice as will restore him to perfect health and manhood. Don't be deceived by quacks who have no knowledge of the diseases they profess to cure, but who will take your money and leave you worse off than they found you. Don't be deceived by boasting advertisements of quacks who have stolen the name of some reputable physician, and are using it to deceive the unfortunate. Don't be deceived by any one else, but call on or write to the Doctor, who will tell you the truth, and who will cure you if any one can. Don't be deceived by any one who will not tell you the truth about your case. Don't be deceived by any one who will not tell you the truth about your case. Don't be deceived by any one who will not tell you the truth about your case.
